

Empty Window

Lyrics by Kelly Ann Jacobson

I'm leaving, yeah I'm telling her goodbye,
I'm running down the stairs so that I don't see her cry.
Can't be the only place in which she will confide,
'cause I've got my own storms and they're raging on inside.

The woman's at the window
and she's calling out my name.
The woman's at the window
and she's calling me insane.

And when I look back the curtain shields the girl inside,
The kind of girl that you want to both protect and hide.
You cannot reveal her, even if you tried.
Cause when you do the ghost will fly right from your mind.

The woman's at the window
and she's calling out my name.
The woman's at the window
and she's calling me insane.

She is just an outline, a shadow on a screen,
She's complicated, cagey, a little bit obscene,
But right then through the window, she looks down like a queen,
Cause she consumes my heart and follows me in my dreams.

She's calling out my name. (hold end note)
She's calling me insane. (hold)
She's falling through that window. (hold)
Just flying from that window. (hold)

The woman's at the window
and she's calling out my name.
The woman's at the window
and she's calling me insane.
